

TEN

With what a graceful tenderness he loves!
And breathes the softest, the sincerest vows! Addison
4. Kind attention; anxiety for the good of another.
Having no children, she did with singular care and tender- ness intend the education of Philip and Margaret. Bacon
5. Scrupulousness; caution.

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, Scruples, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By th' bishop of Bayon. Shakespeare Henry VIII.

Some are unworthily censured for keeping their own, whom tenderness how to get honestly teacheth to spend discreetly; whereas such need no great thriftiness in preserving their own who assume more liberty in exacting from others. Watson

True tenderness of conscience is nothing else but an awful and exact sense of the rule which should direct it; and while it steers by this compass, and is sensible of every declination from it, so long it is properly tender. South

6. Cautious care.
There being implanted in every man's nature a great tender- ness of reputation, to be careless of it is looked on as a mark of a degenerate mind. Government of the Tongue

7. Soft pathos of expression.
TENDINOUS. adj. [tendineus, Fr. tendinis, Latin.] Sinewy; containing tendons; consisting of tendons.

Nervous and tendinous parts have worse symptoms, and are harder of cure than fleshy ones. Wise man

TENDON. n. f. [tendo, Latin.] A sinew; a ligature by which the joints are moved.

A fruma in her instep lay very hard and big amongst the tendons. Wise man's Surgery

The entrails these embrace in spiral strings, Those clasp th' arterial tubes in tender rings;
The tendons some compacted close produce,
And some thin fibres for the skin diffuse. Blackmore

TENDRIL. n. f. [tendrillon, French.] The clasp of a vine, or other climbing plant.

In wanton ringlets wav'd,
As the vine curls her tendrils; which imply'd Subjection. Milton's Par. Lost, b. iv.

So may thy tender blossoms fear no blite;
Nor guards with venom'd teeth thy tendrils bite. Dryden

The tendrils or clasps of plants are given only to such as have weak stalks, and cannot raise up or support themselves.

Ray on the Creation

TENERICLOSE. adj. [tenebricosus, tenebrifus, Latin.] Dark; TENEROUS. adj. gloomy.

TENEROSITY. n. f. [tenebra, Latin.] Darkness; gloom.

TENEMENT. n. f. [tenementum, Latin.] Any thing held by a tenant.

What reasonable man will not think that the tenement shall be made much better, if the tenant may be drawn to build himself some handsome habitation thereon, to ditch and inclose his ground? Spenser on Ireland

'Tis policy for father and son to take different sides;
For then lands and tenements commit no treason. Dryden

Who has informed us, that a rational soul can inhabit no tenement, unless it has just such a sort of frontispiece. Locke

Treat on, treat on, is her eternal note,
And lands and tenements glide down her throat. Pope

TENENT. n. f. See TENET.

TENERITY. n. f. [teneritas, tener, Latin.] Tenderness. Ainsl.

TENESMUS. n. f.

The stone shutting up the orifice of the bladder, is attended with a tenesmus, or need to go to stool. Arbutnot

TENET. n. f. [tenet, Latin.] he holds. It is sometimes written tenets, or they hold. Position; principle; opinion.

That all animals of the land are in their kind in the sea, although received as a principle, is a tenet very questionable.

Bacon's Vulgar Errors, b. iii.

While, in church matters, profit shall be the touch-stone for faith and manners, we are not to wonder if no gainful tenet be deposed. Decay of Piety

This favours of something ranker than socinianism, even the tenets of the fifth monarchy, and of sovereignty founded only upon faintship. South's Sermons

They wonder men should have mistook
The tenets of their master's book. Prior

TENNIS. n. f. [this play is supposed by Skinner to be so named from the word tenes, take it, hold it, or there it goes, used by the French when they drive the ball.] A play at which a ball is driven with a racket.

The barber's man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis balls. Shak.

There was he gaming, there o'ertook in's rowle, There falling out at tennis. Shakespeare Hamlet

A prince, by a hard destiny, became a tennis ball long to the blind goddess. Havel's Vocal Forest

It can be no more disgrace to a great lord to draw a fair picture, than to play at tennis with his page. Peacocks

The inside of the uvea is blacked like the walls of a tennis

court, that the rays falling upon the retina may not, by being rebounded thence upon the uvea, be returned again; for such a repercussion would make the sight more confused. Moré's Antidote against Abuse

We conceive not a tennis ball to think, and consequently not to have any volition, or preference of motion to rest.

Locke

We have no exedra for the philosophers adjoining to our tennis court, but there are alehouses. Arbutnot and Pope

To TENNIS. v. a. [from the noun.] To drive as a ball.

Those four garçons issuing forth upon the enemy, will so drive him from one side to another, and tennis him amongst them, that he shall find no where safe to keep his feet in, nor hide himself. Spenser on Ireland

TENNON. n. f. [French.] The end of a timber cut to be fitted into another timber.

Such variety of parts, solid with hollow; some with cavities as mortises to receive, others with tenons to fit them. Ray

The tenant-jaw being thin, hath a back to keep it from bending. Moxon's Mech. Exercise

TENOUR. n. f. [tenor, Lat. tencor, Fr.]

1. Continuity of state; constant mode; manner of continuity; general currency.

We might perceive his words interrupted continually with sighs, and the tenor of his speech not knit together to one constant end, but dissolved in itself, as the vehemency of the inward passion prevailed. Sidney

When the world first out of chaos sprang, So fill'd the days, and so the tenor ran
Of their felicity; a spring was there,
An everlasting spring, the jolly year Led round in his great circle, no winds breath
As now did smell of Winter or of death. Crahaus

Still I see the tenor of man's woe Hold on the same, from woman to begin. Milton

Does not the whole tenor of the divine law positively require humility and meekness to all men. Spratt

Inspire my numbers,
Till I my long laborious work complete,
And add perpetual tenor to my rhymes, Deduc'd from nature's birth to Caesar's times. Dryden

This success would look like chance if it were not perpendicular, and always of the same tenor. Dryden

Can it be poison! poison of one tenor, Or hot, or cold. Dryden's Don Sebastian

There is so great a uniformity amongst them, that the whole tenor of those bodies thus preferred clearly points forth the month of May. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

In such lays as neither ebb nor flow, Correctly cold, and regularly low,
That humming faults, one quiet tenor keep,
We cannot blame indeed—but we may sleep. Pope

2. Sense contained; general course or drift.

Has not the divine Apollo said, Is't not the tenor of his oracle,
That king Leontes shall not have an heir, Till his lost child be found? Shak. Winter's Tale

By the stern brow and waspish action,
Which she did use as she was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenor. Shakespeare As you like it —When it is paid according to the tenor. Shakespeare

Reading it must be repeated again and again with a close attention to the tenor of the discourse, and a perfect neglect of the divisions into chapters and verses. Locke

3. A found in music.

The first clef cutteth the air too sharp to make the found equal; and therefore a mean or tenor is the sweetest part.

Bacon's Nat. Hist. N. 173.

TENSE. adj. [tenus, Latin.] Stretched; stiff; not lax.

For the free passage of the found into the ear, it is requisite that the tympanum be tense, and hard stretched, otherwise the laxness of the membrane will certainly dead and damp the found. Holder

TENSE. n. f. [tempus, Fr. tenus, Lat.]

[In grammar.] Tense, in strict speaking, is only a variation of the verb to signify time.

As forethought, when it is natural, answers to memory, so when methodical it answers to reminiscence, and may be called forecath; all of them expressed in the tenses given to verbs. Memory faith, I did see; reminiscence, I had seen; forecath, I shall see; forecath; I shall have seen. Gray

Ladies, without knowing what tenses and participles are, speak as properly and as correctly as gentlemen. Locke

He should have the Latin words given him in their first case and tense, and should never be left to seek them himself from a dictionary. Watts

TENSENESS. n. f. [from tense.] Contradiction; tension: the contrary to laxity. Should

Should the pain and tenseness of the part continue, the operation must take place. Sharp's Surgery

TENSIBLE. adj. [tenibilis, Latin.] Capable of being extended.

Gold is the closest, and therefore the heaviest, of metals, and is likewise the most flexible and tenibile. Bacon

TENSILE. adj. [tenilis, Latin.] Capable of extension.

All bodies ductile and tensile, as metals, that will be drawn into wires, have in them the appetite of not discontinuing.

Bacon's Nat. Hist. N. 845.

TENSION. n. f. [tenfion, Fr. tenfion, Lat.] The act of stretching; not laxation; the state of being stretched; not laxity.

It can have nothing of vocal found, voice being raised by stiff tenfion of the larynx; and on the contrary, this found by a relaxed posture of the muscles thereof. Holder

Still are the subtle strings in tenfion found, Like those of lutes, to just proportion wound,
Which of the air's vibration is the force. Blackmore

TENSIVE. adj. [tenfius, Latin.] Giving a sensation of stiffness or contraction.

From cholera is a hot burning pain; a beating pain from the pulse of the artery; a tensive pain from distention of the parts by the fulness of humours. Player on Humours

TENSURE. n. f. [tenfura, Latin.] The act of stretching, or state of being stretched; the contrary to laxation or laxity.

This motion upon preflure, and the reciprocal thereof, motion upon tensure, we call motion of liberty, which is, when any body being forced to a preternatural extent, restoreth itself to the natural. Bacon

TENT. n. f. [tente, French; tentarium, Latin.]

1. A soldier's moveable lodging-place, commonly made of canvas extended upon poles.

The Turks, the more to terrify Corfu, taking a hill not far from it, covered the same with tents. Kuelles

Because of the same craft he wrought with them; for by occupation they were tent makers. Acts xviii. 23.

2. Any temporary habitation; a pavilion.

He saw a spacious plain, whereon Were tents of various hue: by some were herds Of cattle grazing. Milton's Par. Lost, b. xi.

To Chubb's pleasing plains he took his way,
There pitch'd his tents, and there resolv'd to stay. Dryden

3. [Tente, French.] A roll of lint put into a fore.

Modest doubt is call'd
The beacon of the wife; the tent that searches
To th' bottom of the world. Shak. Trail and Cressida

A declining orifice keep open by a small tent dipt in some medicaments, and after digestion withdraw the tent and heal
it. Wise man's Surgery

4. [Vino tinto, Spanish.] A species of wine deeply red, chiefly from Galicia in Spain.

To TENT. v. n. [from the noun.] To lodge as in a tent; to tabernacle.

The smiles of knaves
Find in my cheeks, and schoolboy's tears take up The glances of my sight. Shakespeare

To TENT. v. a. To search as with a medical tent.

I'll tent him to the quick; if he but blench, I know my course. Shakespeare Hamlet

I have some wounds upon me, and they smart.
—Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude, And tent themselves with death. Shakespeare Coriolanus

Some surgeons, possibly against their own judgments, keep wounds tented, often to the ruin of their patient. Wise man

TENTATION. n. f. [tentation, French; tentatio, Latin.] Trial; temptation.

The first delusion Satan put upon Eve, and his whole ten- tation, when he said ye shall not die, was in his equivocation, ye shall not incur present death. Bacon's Vulgar Errors

TENTATIVE. adj. [tentative, effort, Fr. tents, Latin.] Trying; essaying.

TENTED. adj. [from tent.] Covered with tents.

Their arms of mine till now have us'd Their dearest action in the tented field. Shak. Othello

The foe deceiv'd, he pass'd the tented plain,
In Troy to mingle with the hostile train. Pope's Odyssey

TENTER. n. f. [tenda, tentus, Latin.]

1. A hook on which things are stretched.

2. To be on the TENTER. To be on the stretch; to be in difficulties; to be in suspense.

In all my past adventures,
I ne'er was set so on the tenters;
Or taken tardy with dilemma,
That e'er I try way I turn does hem me. Hudibras, p. ii.

To TENTER. v. a. [from the noun.] To stretch by hooks.

A blown bladder prest rife again, and when leather or cloth is tentered, it springeth back. Bacon's N. Hist. N. 12.

much at the tenth or twentieth trial, as we did after much practice. Boyle

TEP

TENTH. n. f. [from the adjective.]

1. The tenth part.

Of all the horses,
The treasure in the field achiev'd, and city,
We render you the tenth. Shakespeare Coriolanus

By decimation and a tithed death,
If thy revenges hunger for that food Which nature loaths, take thou the destin'd tenth. Shak.

To purchase but the tenth of all their store,
Would make the mighty Persian monarch poor. Dryden

Suppose half an ounce of silver now worth a bushel of wheat; but should there be next year a scarcity, five ounces of silver would purchase but one bushel: so that money would be then nine tenths less worth in respect of food. Locke

2. Tithes.

With cheerful heart
The tenth of thy increase bestow, and own Heav'n's bounteous goodness, that will sure repay Thy grateful duty. Philips

3. Tenths are that yearly portion or tribute which all livings ecclesiastical yield to the king. The bishop of Rome pretended right to this revenue by example of the high priest of the Jews, who had tenths from the Levites, till by Henry the eighth they were annexed perpetually to the crown. Cowel

TENTHLY. adv. [from tenth.] In the tenth place.

TENTHINOUS. adj. [tentiginis, Latin.] Stiff; stretched.

TENTWORT. n. f. A plant. Ainsl.

TENUITY. n. f. [tenuitas, French; tenuitas, from tenuis, Latin.]

Thinness; exility; smallness; minuteness; not grossness.

Firs and pines mount of themselves in height without side boughs; partly heat, and partly tenuity of juice, sending the sap upwards. Bacon's Nat. Hist. N. 533.

The tenuity and contempt of clergymen will soon let them see what a poor carcass they are, when parted from the influence of that supremacy. King Charles

Consider the divers figurings of the brain; the tenuities or filaments thereof; their difference in tenuity, or apertures for motion. Glenville's Sci-f.

Aliment circulating through an animal body, is reduced to an almost imperceptible tenuity, before it can serve animal purposes. Arbutnot

At the height of four thousand miles the aether is of that wonderful tenuity, that if a small sphere of common air, of an inch diameter, should be expanded to the thinness of that aether, it would more than take up the orb of Saturn, which is many million times bigger than the earth. Bentley

TENUOUS. adj. [tenuis, Latin.] Thin; small; minute.

Another way of their attraction is by a tenuous emanation, or continued effluvia, which after some distance retracteth unto itself. Brown's Vulgar Err. b. ii.

TENURE. n. f. [tenor, Latin. tenure, Fr. tenura, law Latin.]

Tenure is the manner whereby tenements are holden of their lords. In Scotland are four tenures; the first is pura economy, which is proper to spiritual men, paying nothing for it, but devota animarum suffragia; the second they call feu, which holds of the king, church, barons, or others, paying a certain duty called feudi firma; the third is a holding in blanch by payment of a penny, rose, pair of gilt spurs, or some such thing, if asked; the fourth is by service of ward and relief, where the heir being minor is in the custody of his lord, together with his lands, &c. and land holden in this fourth manner is called feudum de hauberk or haubert, feudum militare or loricatorum. Tenure in gross is the tenure in capite; for the crown is called a seignory in gross, because a corporation of and by itself. Cowel

The service follows the tenure of lands; and the lands were given away by the kings of England to those lords. Spenser

The uncertainty of tenure, by which all worldly things are held, ministers very unpleasant meditation. Raleigh

Man must be known, his strength, his state,
And by that tenure he holds all of fate. Dryden

TEREFACATION. n. f. [terefacio, Latin.] The act of warming to a small degree.

TEPID. adj. [tepidus, Latin.] Lukewarm; warm in a small degree.

The tepid caves, and fens, and shores,
Their brood as numerous hatch. Milton

He with his tepid rays the rose renews,
And licks the dropping leaves, and dries the dew. Dryden

Such things as relax the skin are likewise sudorific; as warm water, friction, and tepid vapours. Arbutnot

TEPIDITY. n. f. [from tepid.] Lukewarmness.

TEPOR. n. f. [tepor, Latin.] Lukewarmness; gentle heat.

The small pox, mortal during such a season, grew more favourable by the tepor and moisture in April. Arbutnot
